The Office for Audit and Advisory Services Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs)

Q: What is the role of the Northwestern University Office for Audit and Advisory Services?

A: The Office for Audit and Advisory Services serves as an independent and objective resource to examine and evaluate University activities as a service to the Board of Trustees and management of Northwestern University. The Office for Audit and Advisory Services is responsible for conducting internal audits and evaluating the University's risk management, control, and governance processes. We also provide additional oversight services in the areas of compliance, information technology, and consulting.
