Take Our Daughters and Sons to Work Day 2017

Thank you for coming to Take Our Sons and Daughters to Work Day at Northwestern University. This is a chance for you to learn about some of the different jobs and careers that someone could have at a university. You will have one or more leaders assigned to your group for the day. They are here to help you have a great time and get the most out of the day. Here are some things that you need to keep in mind while visiting Northwestern:

Respect

./ Respect the volunteers and Northwestern employees

People are taking time out of their day to meet with you. They have a lot to share with you. Respect them just as you would a parent or teacher

./ Respect means following the rules

There will be rules about things you can touch, times you can eat, places you need to be. Follow those rules. If you don't follow the rules, you risk not being able to participate in this event.

./ Respect means saying please and thank you

Appreciate all that you are being given today. Please and thank you goes a long way.

./ Respect means paying attention and asking good questions

You will enjoy today the most by learning everything that you can. This is your chance to learn about a future career. Ask the experts!

./ Respect means turning off cell phones and videogames

Your family has our number if there is an emergency. There is no reason to have electronics on during our programming. We will take it away until the end of the day if you can't respect this rule.

./ Respect means being a great representative of your school and community.

Although you are learning about Northwestern, we are learning about you. Show us how great your class, school and community are!
