Northwestern University employees who incur bona fide occupational related injuries or illnesses shall be entitled to all necessary medical and hospital care. Additionally, employees who are medicare approved to be absent from work by a University-authorized physician shall be entitled to certain disability benefits in accordance with the Illinois Workers' Compensation and Occupational Diseases Act and other related laws.

A. MEDICAL TREATMENT PROCEDURE

Northwestern University has designated Occupational Medicine Evanston/Glenbrook Associates (OMEGA), NorthShore University HealthSystem (Evanston Hospital), 2650 Ridge Avenue, Suite 4225, Evanston, Illinois, or 2050 Pfingston Road, Suite 280, Glenview, Illinois, (847) 657-1700, as the primary care facility for work-related injuries and illnesses. This facility is set up for emergency and extended care and is well staffed and equipped to provide University employees with superior medical services.

Department Administrators are directed to instruct their supervisors to use OMEGA for all employees needing work-related medical care during the University workday. Hospital emergency services shall be used only in life-threatening medical situations, e.g. severe chest pains, gun shot wounds, severe burns, hemorrhaging, severe head injuries, open (compound) fractures and other situations which could be considered life threatening. Should life-threatening circumstances occur, the University Police (UP) should be called at 911. UP will contact the Evanston Fire Department paramedics and direct them to the employee for treatment and transportation to the NorthShore University HealthSystem emergency room. Injured employees taken to NorthShore University HealthSystem should identify themselves as Northwestern University OMEGA patients. Follow-up care, if needed, will be provided by OMEGA at their Evanston facility.

1. If an employee is injured during work hours (8:30 A.M. to 5:00 P.M., Monday through Friday) and medical treatment is required and it is of a non-life-threatening nature, the following procedure is to be followed:
   a. The injured employee's supervisor is notified of the injury or illness. In most cases the employee will be referred to OMEGA. On some occasions, based upon the nature of the injury or illness, an employee may be immediately referred to the NorthShore University HealthSystem emergency room.
   b. The injured employee's supervisor will notify the Claims Division of the Office of Risk Management of the injury and assist in completion of the Supervisor's Injury or Illness Investigation Report. The supervisor must provide the name of the injured party, his/her date of birth, his/her Social Security number, the nature of the injury, and how the injury occurred. The supervisor will also advise the Claims Division of any injury-causing conditions which should be corrected to prevent future injuries.
   c. The Claims Division will then contact OMEGA to arrange for an appointment for an examination. The Claims Division will then advise the supervisor of the appointment time and location.

2. All employees receiving either initial or emergency room follow-up treatment at OMEGA will be given a "Duty Status Report" indicating when they may resume their full or modified duties and whether a follow-up visit with the doctor is required. Employees returning to the Evanston Campus from OMEGA will deliver the "Duty Status Report" to the Claims Division at 2020 Ridge, Suite 240 Evanston Campus 60208-4335. When the employee is not returning to Evanston, it will be his/her responsibility to see that the "Duty Status Report" is delivered to the Claims Division as soon as possible and that his/her supervisor is notified of his/her work status.

3. If an employee is injured between 5:00 P.M. and 8:30 A.M. or on weekends, and medical treatment is required, the employee should seek such treatment at the NorthShore University HealthSystem emergency room. Upon arrival at the emergency room, employees must identify themselves as Northwestern University OMEGA patients as OMEGA will provide follow-up care, if needed.

B. MODIFIED DUTY PROGRAM

If it is determined by OMEGA physicians that, as the result of a work related injury or illness, an employee is not able to perform his/her normal duties but is able to perform other meaningful tasks, a modified duty assignment will be provided to the employee. The following procedure will be used in the identification of suitable modified duty and the assignment of the employee to same:

University Departments have identified various tasks under their jurisdiction which may be utilized for modified duty purposes. Upon delivery of the OMEGA "Duty Status Report" to the Claims Division, the Claims Division or his designee will check with the employee's department to determine if modified duty within physician restrictions is available. If the employee's department is unable or unwilling to provide appropriate modified duty, other departments will be contacted to locate duties that are suitable for the employee. Upon notification by OMEGA that an employee is ready to resume normal duties, the Claims Division will advise his/her department of the employee's change in work status. The Claims Division will at all times keep the Department of Human Resources informed as to the employee's modified duty assignment and payroll status.

C. WORKERS' COMPENSATION BENEFITS

1. If, after initial treatment or examination at OMEGA, the injured employee is authorized to be absent from work and/or will require additional treatment or medical care, he/she may be eligible for certain disability benefits under the Illinois Workers' Compensation and Occupational Diseases Act. This will depend on the employee's length of disability, the nature of employment with the University, in most cases, will rely on the medical opinion of the University-authorized physician and/or hospital facility for treatment of a work related injury which has not been certified by a University-authorized physician, will be either on his/her own accumulated sick time, if available, or will be off the payroll.

2. Should there arise a difference of opinion between the University-authorized physician and the employee's personal physician regarding the employee's length of disability, the University, in most cases, will rely on the medical opinion of the University-authorized physician and the medical differences, if any, may be resolved before the Illinois Industrial Commission.

3. Workers' Compensation benefits may be postponed, withheld or suspended should the employee: (a) fail or refuse to submit detailed medical reports or other information from his/her personal physician or hospital to the University; or (b) refuse or fail to appear for a medical examination by a physician designated by the University.

4. Employees who sustain on-the-job injuries or illnesses may not receive Workers' Compensation disability benefits without being first certified as disabled by a University-authorized physician.

5. In accordance with the Illinois Workers' Compensation and Occupational Diseases Act and applicable rules of the Illinois Industrial Commission, any employee absent from work as a result of a work related injury which has not been certified by a University-authorized physician, will be either on his/her own accumulated sick time, if available, or will be off the payroll.

6. It is the responsibility of each employee to keep the University, via the Claims Division, informed of his/her current medical condition when he/she chooses to be treated by personal physician rather than the University's designated medical facility.
FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What can I expect from Northwestern University if I am injured at work? The University will pay for medical treatment and will pay you for time lost because of the injury. The University will also make every effort to return you to work as quickly as possible, either to your regular job or to duties defined by your physical capabilities during rehabilitation.

How much will I be paid if I am injured at work and unable to return to my regular duties? Injured employees who are unable to work in any capacity are entitled to “temporary total disability” (TTD) payments equal to 2/3 of their normal salary with a maximum that is currently $1,331.20 per week (this figure is adjusted for inflation periodically by the Illinois Industrial Commission). The Illinois Workers’ Compensation Act states that TTD payments shall not be made for the employee’s first three days off work unless the employee is off ten or more days, however Northwestern University does pay full-time employees for the first three days off. TTD payments are non-taxable and are made bi-weekly on regular University pay days. TTD payments are based on time reports so it is essential that a copy of the initial time report and any subsequent time reports be sent by the employee’s supervisor to the Claims Division for all pay periods during which an employee is entitled to receive TTD. Employees who return to a modified duty position will be paid 100% of their normal salary.

What about benefits? Personal floating holidays, sick time, and vacation do not accrue while an employee is on temporary total disability. Because the Payroll Division of Human Resources does not issue TTD checks, deductions for benefits such as health and dental insurance, life insurance, accidental death and dismemberment insurance, credit union, union dues, and the retirement plan are not made. It is thus the injured employee’s responsibility to make sure that he or she makes payment to the Benefits Division, the Credit Union, and/or the employee’s union to ensure continued coverages. Benefits do accrue normally for persons on modified duty.

What types of accidents need to be reported? All accidents and injuries, even if no medical attention is required, must be reported to your supervisor. By failing to report an accident you jeopardize your workers’ compensation benefits, especially in the event symptoms do not appear for an extended period of time.

Are all injuries at work considered workers’ compensation? No. To be a workers’ compensation case (compensable) the injury must be job-related and arise as a result of one’s work activities. Examples of injuries sustained that may not be compensable are: injuries while on break or at lunch; injuries from falls when entering the workplace; injuries sustained during intentional violations of safety rules or from starting a fight with a co-worker; and injuries sustained while impaired by drugs or alcohol. This is a rather complicated legal area that frequently changes with new court rulings. All Northwestern cases are carefully reviewed and written notification is made to employees when the case is deemed non-compensable. Claim denials can be appealed to the Director of Risk Management.

Can I see my own doctor? Yes. The Workers’ Compensation Act requires employers to pay for up to two physicians, other than the employer’s designated providers, selected by employees for treatment of work related injuries. It is important to note that payment to an employee-selected physician can only be made upon receipt by the University of a medical report from that physician. If medical reports are not provided, payment remains the employee’s responsibility.

What do I do with medical bills and/or doctor’s reports? All medical bills and physician’s reports should be forwarded to the Claims Division at 2020 Ridge, Suite 240, Evanston Campus, 60208-4335. If you have already paid a bill for a doctor visit, prescription, etc., submit a receipt showing that payment has been made and you will be reimbursed.

Will I be paid for work time taken when I go for follow-up treatment (doctor visits, physical therapy, etc.)? Full-time employees will be paid for visits to University-designated providers. Those employees seeking treatment from providers other than those designated by the University will not be paid for treatment during work hours, however they may use sick time for this purpose. Part-time and temporary employees must use sick time, if available, for all follow-up visits to medical providers during working hours.

What should I do with bills I might receive from collection agencies? There are two main reasons that you may receive a bill from a collection agency. The first is when a treating physician or hospital fails to submit required medical reports to the University. If this happens, forward the bill to the Claims Division. The University will submit a second request to the medical provider; however, payment will only be made upon receipt of medical status reports. It should be noted that the University’s recommended medical provider, OMEGA, invoices the University directly so employees should never see either a bill or collection notice from OMEGA. The second situation in which you may see a bill from a collection agency occurs when a University preferred provider organization (PPO) who has contracted with the University to discount bills, receives the agreed upon discounted payment and fails to credit a patient's account for the discount taken. Under these circumstances, submit the collection notice to the Claims Division so the problem can be resolved as quickly as possible.
