Where: James L Allen Center, 2169 Campus Drive, Evanston, IL

Contact: Jeff Henderson, jeffhenderson@northwestern.edu

Opportunities to address the pressing global impacts of climate change have never been more critical, particularly in this consequential Climate Decade. From the clean energy economy to intersectional issues like environmental justice, sustainable investing, climate policy, and science communication, there are countless ways Northwestern faculty and collaborators are lending expertise to guide the way forward.

As the University hub for research and education in sustainability and energy, the Institute for Sustainability and Energy at Northwestern (ISEN) will convene faculty and partners on Dec. 1-2 to discuss new and ongoing work that accelerates the speed, broadens the scale, and deepens the impact of climate and energy solutions worldwide.

This 2-day symposium will facilitate discussion at the convergence of more than 20 academic disciplines, departments, centers and institutes, and explore potential points of future University collaboration around Climate and Energy Transition, and Resilient Communities.

18th Annual Heart Failure Holiday Symposium

When: December 2-3, 2022, All day

Contact: Haley Burkhardt, haley.burkhardt@northwestern.edu

Now in its 18th year, this symposium is respected as a top-tier regional heart failure meeting. Critical updates and thoughtful contemporary reviews delivered by national experts in the field, including recognized Northwestern faculty, have been the hallmark of this program. This year we will once again assemble leading cardiologists, cardiac surgeons, nurses, and psychologists with expertise in heart failure and cardiac surgery to provide updates on the very latest clinical, scientific, genetic, behavioral, and technological advances for managing patients with heart failure.

Art Exhibitions

Looking 101: Teaching Gallery

When: Through Dec. 4

Where: Block Museum of Art

How do we slow down our looking habits to better understand the process of meaning-making? How do our individual backgrounds and lived experiences affect how and what we see?

We invite you to enter our teaching gallery and engage in a typical classroom activity: an exercise in close looking that can be used to analyze any work of art. We have intentionally excluded contextual and interpretive texts from the walls of this exhibition so you can begin your visit with direct observation of the artworks.

The Block Collects 2022

When: October 12 - December 4, 2022

Where: Block Museum of Art

Contact: Lindsay Bosch, lindsay.bosch@northwestern.edu

Every year The Block brings new works of art into the collection to support Northwestern University's teaching and learning mission. Each work becomes part of an expanding resource that students, faculty, and our wider public can engage with through classes, research visits, and exhibitions like this.

Acquired by The Block over the past five years, these works build on strengths and expand perspectives represented in the collection.

Speakers and Presentations

Center for Latinx Digital Media Virtual Seminar Series: Prof. Celeste Wagner

When: Thursday, December 1, 2022, 12:00 PM - 1:00 PM Central

Where: Online

Contact: Center for Latinx Digital Media, ldm@northwestern.edu

Years after the emergence of Ni Una Menos in Argentina and #MeToo in the United States, how do feminist activists and general audiences in both countries evaluate and transform communication of sexual and gender-based violence? Drawing from cross-country survey experiments and interviews with feminist actors and general publics, I analyze how two countries in the Americas—loci of some of the largest anti-violence movements in recent times—are constructing, challenging, and resisting communication for gender equality.

Celeste Wagner (Ph.D., University of Pennsylvania) is an Assistant Professor at the College of Journalism and Communications at the University of Florida. Through mixed and comparative methods, her research studies media reception and impact around social and political issues, with a particular focus on intersecting gender inequalities.

Memory, Transformation, and the Communal Leprous Body in Premodern Christian Thought - Lily Stewart

When: Thursday, December 1, 2022, 12:00 PM - 12:45 PM Central

Where: Online for those outside the Northwestern community - register here

Contact: Myria Knox, (312) 503-7962, p_knox@northwestern.edu

This lecture will examine how medieval people with leprosy imagined the processes by which their bodies and identities transformed. Leprosy was a degenerative condition that often carried a long prognosis and significant changes in mobility, appearance, and social positioning. We will explore how people with the disease were often caught between the memories of their former, healthy identities, and the realities of their ailing presents. At the same time, we will consider how memory was used to craft communities of care around and among leprosy people that centered on the inherent mutability of human flesh, and the potential of all bodies to become leprosy.

Joseph Farrell \(University of Pennsylvania\): Is race a theme in Vergil's Aeneid?

When: Thursday, December 1, 2022, 3:30 PM - 5:00 PM Central

Where: Kresge Hall, 1515, 1880 Campus Drive, Evanston, IL

Contact: Elizabeth Upenieks, (847) 491-7597, classics@northwestern.edu

The title of this talk poses a question that has seldom if ever been asked, and that appears simple, but is in fact multi-faceted. The talk will explore some of the theoretical and practical issues involved. It will not try to answer the question posed in its title, but will try to clarify what is at stake when one asks it.

PBC Seminar: Chicago Botanic Garden Short Talks

The Ethics of Community-Engaged Work

When: Friday, December 2, 2022, 12:00 PM - 1:00 PM Central

Where: Online - Webcast Link

Contact: Jill Mannor, (847) 467-3970, jill.mannor@northwestern.edu

Research that engages with communities beyond the academy often involves serious ethical considerations on both a theoretical and practical level. How can scholars in the humanities and humanistic social sciences create meaningful, mutually beneficial community partnerships? How should ethical considerations inform research aims and outcomes? How can those within the academy manage competing institutional expectations and timelines? This free, virtual event will bring together three panelists from leading public humanities initiatives to share their perspectives on the topic of ethical community-engaged work. Moderated by Ruth Curry of Northwestern's Center for Civic Engagement, this discussion will offer diverse perspectives and strategies useful to anyone who is exploring or pursuing community-engaged work.

Breaking the School to Prison Pipeline

When: Friday, December 2, 2022, 12:30 PM - 2:00 PM Central

Where: 700, 500 Davis Street, Evanston, IL 60201

Contact: OLLI Northwestern, olli@northwestern.edu

In-person livestream of the OLLI Northwestern lecture sponsored by Northwestern University's Osher Lifelong Learning Institute (OLLI).

School should be the pathway to a bright future. But for many children it is an inequitable pipeline to the criminal justice system. Black children are 2.5 times more likely to be arrested than white children. Join us for an important discussion on what this does to our communities and what we can do to change it.

Speakers:

Dr. Nneka Jones Tapia, the first psychologist to head the Cook County Jail, and Managing Director for Justice Initiatives at Chicago Beyond

Patrick Keenan-Devlin, Executive Director of the Moran Center for Juvenile Advocacy

Friendship: The Evolution, Biology, and Extraordinary Power of Life's Fundamental Bond

When: Tuesday, December 6, 2022, 7:00 PM - 8:30 PM Central

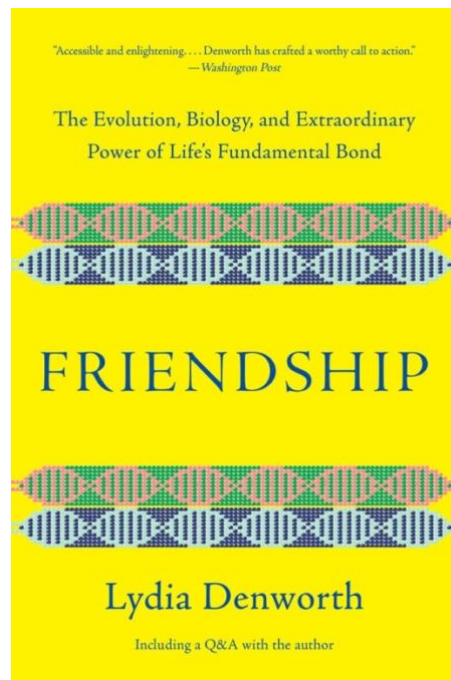

Where: Lake Forest Country Day School, Performing Arts Center, 145 S. Green Bay Rd., Lake Forest, IL. Watch the live stream at www.bit.ly/DenworthLivestream

Contact: Julie Deardorff, (847) 467-3147, Julie.deardorff@northwestern.edu

Award-winning science journalist Lydia Denworth's Friendship: The Evolution, Biology, and Extraordinary Power of Life's Fundamental Bond is a revelatory investigation of friendship, with profound implications for our understanding of what humans and animals alike need to thrive across a lifetime.

In this Family Action Network event, Denworth takes us in search of friendship's biological, psychological, and evolutionary foundations. She finds friendship to be as old as early life on the African savannas—when tribes of people grew large enough for individuals to seek fulfillment of their social needs outside their immediate families.

Denworth coauthored the New York Times bestseller Parent Nation and has written two other books of popular science: I Can Hear You Whisper and Toxic Truth. Her work has also appeared in The Atlantic, The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, Newsweek, Time, and many other publications.

Northwestern University's Department of Philosophy presents Robin Dembroff

When: Friday, December 2, 2022, 4:00 PM - 6:00 PM Central

Where: Kresge Hall, 1515, 1880 Campus Drive, Evanston, IL

Contact: Emily Berry, (847) 491-3656, e-berry@northwestern.edu

The concept of patriarchy is attached to a big promise: the promise of a unified explanation for gender injustice across many places and times. 'Patriarchy' is our name for the system that reproduces systemic gender injustice. But the standard view of patriarchy as a system of men's dominance over women fails us. It distorts or erases the complex, relational field of gendered power wherein we find hierarchies among women, the regular mistreatment of marginalized men (such as gay or Black men), and harms targeting those who are androgynous or intersex. Many feminist scholars, including Judith Butler and Sally Haslanger, conclude from this that we must do away with the concept of patriarchy. Patriarchy, they say, does not exist. In this talk, I'll offer an alternative path—a new paradigm for patriarchy. Through this paradigm, we see patriarchy as the institutionalized system of regulating people in accordance with cultural ideals of what men and women are and ought to be. While this system devalues women as women, it does not do so equally, nor does it thereby benefit men as men. Patriarchy works to the primary benefit of those who most closely approximate institutionalized ideals of manhood—ideals that, in our own context, are configured to align with capitalism, white supremacy, heteronormativity, and ableism. Put simply, patriarchy puts "Real Men" on top.

Terminal Erythropoiesis and Its Dysregulation in Myeloid Neoplasms

When: Tuesday, December 6, 2022, 11:00 AM - 12:00 PM Central

Where: Robert H Lurie Medical Research Center, Baldwin Auditorium, 303 E. Superior, Chicago, IL

Contact: Grace Callihan, (312) 503-7815, grace.callihan@northwestern.edu

Peng Ji, MD, PhD

Professor of Pathology (Experimental Pathology) and Pathology (Hematopathology)

Feinberg School of Medicine

Northwestern University

The Ji laboratory studies normal hematopoiesis and myeloid malignancies. Erythropoiesis, the process by which red blood cells mature, must be carefully regulated under steady state conditions and goes awry under stress/disease conditions. The Ji lab and colleagues recently showed important pathways that regulate normal erythropoiesis and how defects in these pathways induce anemia and ineffective erythropoiesis. This talk will highlight implications of this and further research and how dysregulation of erythropoiesis contributes to disease pathogenesis in myeloid neoplasms.

Sexual Deserts and the Urban Stratification of Sexual Networks with Morgan Purrier, Ph.D.

When: Thursday, December 8, 2022, 12:00 PM - 1:00 PM Central

Where: 625 N Michigan Ave, 1400, Stonewall Conference Room, Chicago, IL

Contact: Andrew Principe, andrew.principe@northwestern.edu

Northwestern's Institute for Sexual and Gender Minority Health and Wellbeing is thrilled to invite you to the December installment of our "Current Issues in LGBTQ Health" series featuring Morgan Purrier, Ph.D.

Urban environments have long been argued to benefit LGBTQ people, especially queer men, through agglomerating queer spaces, resources, and partners. Large cities, such as New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles, frequently garner attention for their gayborhoods, queer leisure, sexual health programs, and dense queer populations. Despite these seemingly queer rich environments, many individuals remain separated, excluded, or dismissed from accessing such dense resources. Dr. Purrier uses the concept of sexual deserts—similar to the term food deserts—to refer to the systematic and structured inequalities in access to quality leisure and space. Focusing on queer men living in sexual deserts, he highlights both the overall difficulty in accessing quality sexual resources and the strategies utilized to build sociogeographic networks of partners and places.

The event is free and open to the public. Virtual registrants will receive a Zoom link prior to the event. Lunch will be provided for in-person attendees who register by December 2nd.

2022-2023 Digital Mental Health Lecture Series

The Center for Behavioral Intervention Technologies (CBITs)

Northwestern University, in collaboration with the Society for Digital Mental Health

Dr. Nick Jacobson is a tenure-track assistant professor in the departments of Biomedical Data Science and Psychiatry within the Center for Technology and Behavioral Health in the Geisel School of Medicine at Dartmouth College. He directs the AI and Mental Health: Innovation in Technology Guided Healthcare (AIM HIGH) Laboratory. Dr. Jacobson researches the use of technology to enhance both the assessment and treatment of anxiety and depression. He has a strong interest in creating personalized just-in-time adaptive interventions and the quantitative tools that make this work possible. To date, Dr. Jacobson's smartphone applications which assess and treat anxiety and depression have been downloaded and installed by more than 50,000 people in over 100 countries. Dr. Jacobson is the principal investigator of an RO1 Awarded from the National Institute of Mental Health studying the use of personalized deep learning models to predict rapid changes in major depressive disorder symptoms using passive sensor data from smartphones and wearable devices.

Family Action Network: Why You Need a Manifesto

When: Monday, December 12, 2022, 7:00 PM - 8:00 PM Central

Where: Online - Webcast Link

Contact: Julie Deardorff, (847) 467-3147, Julie.deardorff@northwestern.edu

Charlotte Burgess-Auburn, the author of You Need a Manifesto: How to Craft Your Convictions and Put Them to Work, speaks with Northwestern University's Liz Gerber about how to craft a personal creed that will help you face daily tasks and roadblocks and create more purpose in your work.

Burgess-Auburn is director of community at Stanford University's Hasso Plattner Institute of Design (the "d.school"). Gerber is a professor at Northwestern, co-director of Northwestern's Center for Human-Computer Interaction + Design, and faculty founder of Design for America, a national network of interdisciplinary students who work together to solve problems they care about in their community.

CASMI Virtual Panel - Defining 'Safety' in Artificial Intelligence

When: Tuesday, December 13, 2022, 12:00 PM - 1:00 PM Central

Where: Online

Contact: Sarah Spurlock, sarah.spurlock@northwestern.edu

The first principle in the White House's Blueprint for an AI Bill of Rights is the right to "Safe and Effective Systems." But what does being safe mean with respect to AI technologies?

Do we have a common definition for what safety means in the digital world? How can we know if the intelligent systems that are in use in so many facets of life and society are endangering or providing safety? What should systems have to demonstrate in order to be considered safe? How do we determine the priority areas that must have focus to define and maintain safety in AI? What should systems have to demonstrate in order to be considered safe? How do we determine the priority areas that must have focus to define and maintain safety in AI? Our panelists bring multiple distinct perspectives of what AI safety should mean and how it should be approached. Join us for a virtual panel discussion exploring how we understand what it means to be safe in a world that is increasingly incorporating AI technologies.

When: Thursday, December 1, 2022, 12:30 PM - 2:00 PM Central

Where: Kresge Hall, Trienens Forum (1-515), 1880 Campus Drive, Evanston, IL

Contact: Eliot Colin, gender@northwestern.edu

In this talk, a Martinican political philosopher and historical sociologist challenges the dominant narratives of French republicanism and of women's history in France. This lecture aims to show the heuristic force of a "black feminist epistemology" in praxis, bringing together the Caribbean, Africa, France, and the United States.

Silyane Larcher is a tenured research scholar in political sciences at the CNRS (French National Center for Scientific Research). With Felix Germain, she co-edited Black French Women and the Struggle for Equality (1848-2016), published at the University Press of Nebraska in 2018. Her main field of research focuses on the tensions between race and citizenship and universalism in France. She is particularly interested in political conflictuality inherited from the colonial past and the democratic present. Her next book (to be published by Le Seuil in 2023), based on a long-term qualitative survey, deals with the social and historical conditions of afrofeminism in France.

This will be a Hybrid event (In-person and via zoom). Register to receive the zoom link.

When: Friday, December 2, 2022, 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM Central

Where: Dearborn Observatory, 2131 Tech Drive, Evanston, IL

Contact: Adrienne Mintz, (847) 491-3644, adrienne.mintz@northwestern.edu

The Dearborn Observatory is open for public viewing every Friday night from 8 to 10 pm during the fall and winter months (Oct-Mar). The sessions are free and open to all. Reservations are required for the first hour but walk-ins are welcome in the second hour. All visitors should note that the dome is neither heated nor air-conditioned so please dress appropriately. Friday evening sessions are held "rain or shine." Unfortunately, the Dearborn is NOT ADA-accessible. Several staircases must be climbed in order to reach the telescope.

To make a reservation go to <http://sites.northwestern.edu/dearborn/>.

CIERA Astronomer Evenings

When: Friday, December 2, 2022, 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM Central

Where: Dearborn Observatory, 2131 Tech Drive, Evanston, IL

Contact: CIERA Astrophysics, (847) 491-8646, CIERA@northwestern.edu

CIERA Astronomer Evenings are special programs that take place on the last Friday of every month at Northwestern's Dearborn Observatory.

Look through the historic telescope and meet and talk with astronomers from CIERA, Northwestern's Center for Interdisciplinary Exploration and Research in Astrophysics!

Each month, different experts will be available to answer your astronomy and astrophysics questions. These evenings begin with a 10-minute introduction to a topic in astronomy, followed by an open Q&A session and fun, interactive demonstrations.

Northwestern Music Academy
Learn more online

For more than 70 years, Northwestern University's Music Academy in Evanston has provided music instruction to children and adult students from surrounding communities and the greater Chicago and Northwest Indiana area.

Most Academy instructors also teach in the Henry and Leigh Bienen School of Music and hold masters and doctoral degrees in music teaching and performance. The Academy often serves as a teaching laboratory for college students enrolled in pedagogy courses and is a member of the National Guild of Community Schools of the Arts.

Piano and Organ

The Music Academy Piano Division offers pre-piano class, which serves as an introduction to more formal piano instruction: keyboard instruction in two tracks for students ages 6 to 18, and instruction for adults. Pre-piano serves as an introduction to more formal piano instruction. Keyboard instruction for children begins with pre-staff music and expands to landmark-based intervallic reading. After the first year of study, most children participate in the Illinois State Music Teacher's Association curriculum assessment, where they demonstrate skills and receive certificates and pins for participation.

Strings

The String Division offers private lessons in violin, viola, and cello, with goals of both providing musical instruction and instilling a love of music and of learning music. The division believes that all children can learn to their potential when placed in an environment that includes clear instruction, an involved parent, and regular opportunities to listen to and perform.
