She takes a badly needed job working for Will Traynor, who is wheelchair-bound after an accident. Will has always lived a huge life—big deals, extreme sports, worldwide travel—and he is not interested in exploring a new one.

Will is acerbic, moody, bossy—but Lou refuses to treat him with kid gloves, and soon his happiness means more to her than she expected. When she learns that Will has shocking plans of his own, Lou sets out to show him that life is still worth living.

Bring your lunch and join your university colleagues. It's okay if you haven't finished the book! This event is for members of the Association of Northwestern University Women.

A full program of events will kick off in September for our new One Book One Northwestern selection, Our Declaration. For more information about the One Book One Northwestern program, please contact Nancy Cunniff at onebook@northwestern.edu or 847-467-2294.

Our Declaration* by Danielle Allen Selected for One Book Program 2017-2018

"Our Declaration: A Reading of the Declaration of Independence in Defense of Equality," a book that brings an eye-opening perspective to one of the most studied texts in U.S. history, is Northwestern University's One Book One Northwestern all-campus read for the 2017-18 academic year.

The author of "Our Declaration," Danielle Allen, will deliver a keynote address and sign books Oct. 19 at Northwestern. All first-year students receive a copy of the One Book each year.

Allen, the director of the Edmond J. Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard University, offers readers an intimate look at experiences that inspired the book when she was teaching in the 2000s on the South Side of Chicago.

At the time, she was a political science and classics professor at the University of Chicago by day, and by night she taught adults in the Odyssey Project, a program of the Illinois Humanities Council to help low-income adults, commonly unemployed or underemployed, reenter the educational system.

In the process, Allen experienced a "personal metamorphosis," rediscovering the Declaration and its central tenets: equality and freedom. The book makes the argument that liberty and equality are interdependent rather than in contest.

Too many Americans buy into the idea that true equality can only be achieved at the expense of our individual freedoms, she argues. As a result, equality has taken a back seat to liberty at the expense of our democracy.

"If we abandon equality, we lose the single bond that makes us a community, that makes us a people with the capacity to be free collectively and individually in the first place," she wrote.

Danielle Allen Biography

A mixed-race woman descended from slaves, Allen idolized her grandfather, a Baptist preacher who helped found the first NAACP chapter in his north Florida region, and her great-grandmother, whose suffragette stories were passed down through her family like lore.

It was in reading the Bible with her family as a child that Allen first learned lessons about how people might slip the bonds of slavery and obtain equality. She rounded out her answers decades later while examining the Declaration of Independence with a group of adult students on the South Side of Chicago.

Widely known for her work on justice and citizenship in both ancient Athens and modern America, Allen is the author of five other books; "The World of Prometheus: The Politics of Punishing in Democratic Athens," "Talking to Strangers: Anxieties of Citizenship since Brown v. Board of Education," "Why Plato Wrote," "Education and Equality" and "Cuz: the Life and Times of Michael A." A 2001 MacArthur Foundation Fellow, she is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society and the Society of American Historians. She is also a contributing columnist for The Washington Post. Allen was educated at Princeton (AB, 1993), Cambridge (Ph.D. 1996) and Harvard (Ph.D. 2000). Before accepting the post at the Edmond J. Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard, she served as a faculty member at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, New Jersey. Before that, she served as dean of the Division of Humanities and professor of political science, classical languages and literature at the University of Chicago.

Allen's current work focuses on the connection between education and democratic equality, as well as the significance of political equality for theoretical accounts of justice.

Academic Lectures

Trapped-ion Quantum Logic With Near-Field Microwave-Driven Gates

Wed, July 12, 1:30 PM- 2:30 PM, free

Technological Institute, F160, 2145 Sheridan Road, Evanston

Contact: Tina Hoff, 847-491-3645, christina.hoff@northwestern.edu

Speaker: David Allcock, NIST Boulder

Hyperfine qubits in laser-cooled trapped atomic ions are one of the most promising platforms for general-purpose quantum computing. Magnetic field insensitive 'clock states' and near-infinite lifetimes allow for minute-long memory coherence times as well as qubit frequencies that are in the convenient microwave domain [1]. Most work on these qubits has so far focused on using lasers for gate operations, however there are several schemes that offer the prospect of performing all coherent operations using purely electronic methods [2,3]. These replace lasers with cheaper, smaller, more stable microwave devices with more straightforward phase control. Microwave elements can also be integrated into trapping structures more easily than their optical counterparts for improved scalability.

Lectures in Physical Chemistry – Mounqi G. Bawendi (MIT)
