Piano and Organ

The Music Academy Piano Division offers pre-piano class, which serves as an introduction to more formal piano instruction: keyboard instruction in two tracks for students ages 6 to 18, and instruction for adults. Pre-piano serves as an introduction to more formal piano instruction. Keyboard instruction for children begins with pre-staff music and expands to landmark-based intervallic reading. After the first year of study, most children participate in the Illinois State Music Teacher's Association curriculum assessment, where they demonstrate skills and receive certificates and pins for participation.

Strings

The String Division offers private lessons in violin, viola, and cello, with goals of both providing musical instruction and instilling a love of music and of learning music. The division believes that all children can learn to their potential when placed in an environment that includes clear instruction, an involved parent, and regular opportunities to listen to and perform.

Voice (adults)

Adult voice classes concentrate on basic vocal technique including registers, breathing, range, and diction. Unique teaching methods and small class size (4 to 5 students) produce good results after a short period of time. The class is recommended not only for people interested in singing, but also for adults who would like to improve their speaking voice. Private voice lessons also available.

Exhibits and Arts Lectures

Northwestern Remembers the First World War

Mon, March 27 to Fri, June 16, free

University Library, 1970 Campus Drive, Evanston

One hundred years after the U.S. entry into World War I, the Northwestern University Libraries look back at how the war shook this campus — and remember the faculty and students who sacrificed all for their country. In addition to artifacts commemorating fallen students and a series of wartime posters by the U.S. government, this exhibit includes a special focus on Northwestern's own Base Hospital 12, a deployment of doctors and nurses drawn from the University and the Chicagoland area.

The Wall of Respect

2017 marks the 50-year anniversary of the Wall of Respect, a mural of Black heroes and heroines painted “guerrilla-style” in 1967 by the Organization of Black American Culture on the wall of a decaying building on the South Side of Chicago. Although it existed for only a few years, the Wall of Respect helped set off a multiracial community mural movement that was active in Chicago and throughout the United States. Many of its characteristics—an assertive, pro-Black, grass-roots, collaborative project, intervening and making itself visible without authorization in public space—continue on in contemporary art and activist projects that appear on walls and in streets, as well as in social media and other virtual “spaces.”

The exhibition at the Block Museum of Art will be curated by students in a first-year seminar at Northwestern University, entitled “The Wall of Respect and Chicago’s Mural Movement.” Many events in the coming year, including an exhibition at the Chicago Cultural Center, a book due out in the fall, and other programs around the city, will commemorate the Wall of Respect in ways that honor its makers, its historical context, and the intellectual and political milieu of greatest relevance to its original existence.

We Are Revolutionaries: The Wall of Respect and Chicago’s Mural Movement

Fri, April 21 to Sun, June 18, free

Block Museum of Art, 40 Arts Circle Dr, Evanston

In 1967, the Organization of Black American Culture painted a huge mural “guerrilla-style” on the wall of a decaying building on the South Side of Chicago. They called it the Wall of Respect. This mural, which grew out of the Black Liberation Movement of the 1960s, was controversial from the start and only survived a few years—but in that time it inspired a community movement that went on to paint vivid colors on walls across the city and beyond.

July's book is Me Before You by Jojo Moyes. Louisa Clark is an ordinary girl living an exceedingly ordinary life—steady boyfriend, close family—who has barely been farther afield than her tiny village. She takes a badly needed job working for Will Traynor, who is wheelchair-bound after an accident. Will has always lived a huge life—big deals, extreme sports, worldwide travel—and he is not interested in exploring a new one.

Will is acerbic, moody, bossy—but Lou refuses to treat him with kid gloves, and soon his happiness means more to her than she expected. When she learns that Will has shocking plans of his own, Lou sets out to show him that life is still worth living.

Bring your lunch and join your university colleagues. It's okay if you haven't finished the book! This event is for members of the Association of Northwestern University Women.

Our Declaration* by Danielle Allen Selected for One Book Program 2017-2018

"Our Declaration: A Reading of the Declaration of Independence in Defense of Equality," a book that brings an eye-opening perspective to one of the most studied texts in U.S. history, is Northwestern University's One Book One Northwestern all-campus read for the 2017-18 academic year.

The author of "Our Declaration," Danielle Allen, will deliver a keynote address and sign books Oct. 19 at Northwestern. All first-year students receive a copy of the One Book each year.

Allen, the director of the Edmond J. Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard University, offers readers an intimate look at experiences that inspired the book when she was teaching in the 2000s on the South Side of Chicago.

At the time, she was a political science and classics professor at the University of Chicago by day, and by night she taught adults in the Odyssey Project, a program of the Illinois Humanities Council to help low-income adults, commonly unemployed or underemployed, reenter the educational system.

In the process, Allen experienced a "personal metamorphosis," rediscovering the Declaration and its central tenets: equality and freedom. The book makes the argument that liberty and equality are interdependent rather than in contest.

Too many Americans buy into the idea that true equality can only be achieved at the expense of our individual freedoms, she argues. As a result, equality has taken a back seat to liberty at the expense of our democracy.

"If we abandon equality, we lose the single bond that makes us a community, that makes us a people with the capacity to be free collectively and individually in the first place," she wrote.

Danielle Allen Biography

A mixed-race woman descended from slaves, Allen idolized her grandfather, a Baptist preacher who helped found the first NAACP chapter in his north Florida region, and her great-grandmother, whose suffragette stories were passed down through her family like lore.

It was in reading the Bible with her family as a child that Allen first learned lessons about how people might slip the bonds of slavery and obtain equality. She rounded out her answers decades later while examining the Declaration of Independence with a group of adult students on the South Side of Chicago.

Widely known for her work on justice and citizenship in both ancient Athens and modern America, Allen is the author of five other books; "The World of Prometheus: The Politics of Punishing in Democratic Athens," "Talking to Strangers: Anxieties of Citizenship since Brown v. Board of Education," "Why Plato Wrote," "Education and Equality" and "Cuz: the Life and Times of Michael A." A 2001 MacArthur Foundation Fellow, she is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society and the Society of American Historians. She is also a contributing columnist for The Washington Post. Allen was educated at Princeton (AB, 1993), Cambridge (Ph.D. 1996) and Harvard (Ph.D. 2000). Before accepting the post at the Edmond J. Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard, she served as a faculty member at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, New Jersey. Before that, she served as dean of the Division of Humanities and professor of political science, classical languages and literature at the University of Chicago.

Allen's current work focuses on the connection between education and democratic equality, as well as the significance of political equality for theoretical accounts of justice.

Somewhere in the universe a massive star ends its life in a cataclysmic explosion every second. These explosions play a critical role in shaping the Universe: they are responsible for the creation and dispersal of the chemical building blocks of stars, planets, and life; they give birth to exotic objects such as neutron stars and black holes; and some are so powerful that they can be used to illuminate the infant universe. This talk will review the history, present, and exciting future of how we study nature's biggest explosions.

Trapped-ion Quantum Logic With Near-Field Microwave-Driven Gates

Speaker: David Allcock, NIST Boulder

Hyperfine qubits in laser-cooled trapped atomic ions are one of the most promising platforms for general-purpose quantum computing. Magnetic field insensitive 'clock states' and near-infinite lifetimes allow for minute-long memory coherence times as well as qubit frequencies that are in the convenient microwave domain [1]. Most work on these qubits has so far focused on using lasers for gate operations, however there are several schemes that offer the prospect of performing all coherent operations using purely electronic methods [2,3]. These replace lasers with cheaper, smaller, more stable microwave devices with more straightforward phase control. Microwave elements can also be integrated into trapping structures more easily than their optical counterparts for improved scalability.
