Have you considered teaching English abroad on a Fulbright?
Fulbright English Teaching Assistants (ETAs) strengthen English-language instruction in over seventy countries world-wide. Host institutions range from elementary and secondary schools to university-level language departments. Applicants may only apply to one country. Some countries require foreign language skills, others do not. The grant period corresponds to the academic year in the host country. Applicants must be U.S. citizens and hold an undergraduate degree by the time the fellowship begins. Many students apply just prior to the start of their senior year for awards beginning after graduation. Graduate students and alum are also eligible to apply.
