Draft Eligible Students Need Letter to Board, Dean Says

by HOWARD DUBIN

All draft eligible students will require a letter from the university to their local draft boards, F. George Seulberger, dean of students, announced yesterday.

The letter must indicate that the student is currently enrolled and satisfactorily pursuing a full time course of study leading to a degree. The board must be notified as to when the individual student's academic year ends.

In order to have a letter written to his local draft board the student must have a draft information card on file in the dean of student's office. Those who already have a card will have a letter sent automatically, Seulberger said.

But those new students, transfers, and old students who do not have a card filled out must do so immediately in the dean of student's office, Scott 211.

THE LETTERS will be required when a student receives his questionnaire or his selective service number.

"Since the letter must certify that the student is making normal progress toward a degree," Seulberger said, "the student must plan to take a total of 42 hours for the year."

Picture IDs To Be Used

by BOB BOYLE

Registration this year is some things new, some things old. University officials feel as if they are living on borrowed time and everybody is blue about the whole affair.

The newest part of registration process will be the issuing of picture identification cards to all Evanston campus students. Everyone registering will be given a permit which is to be taken immediately to the basement of Dearborn Observatory where the pictures will be taken.

THE PERMIT card will have to be presented again Monday when ID cards are issued in the Music school building.

In the actual process of registering, the lines start forming today at 8:30 a.m. The general rule is freshmen this morning, seniors this afternoon. Everybody else will register tomorrow.

All students must be enrolled by 5 p.m. tomorrow. A $5 fee must accompany late registrations.

EXACTLY WHO will be registering is not as definite as the process itself. The "something new"—undergraduate students entering for the first time—are accounted for. The office of admissions has announced that the number of undergraduates this fall and summer is approximately the same as the number in 1950. Summer admissions are included because the uncertain draft situation caused many freshmen to enter early.

"We just don't know," is the statement echoed by nearly all deans and registrars about "old" students returning. "I've never operated in a year so uncertain," was the comment of Kenneth Olson, dean of journalism school.

Today's Weather

Mostly cloudy and much cooler tomorrow. High Thursday 58, low 42. West and northwesterly winds at 30 miles per hour.

Paz Heads NU Guests At Sunday Conference

by JACK ROBERTSON

Fifty leading American publishers and editors will meet Sunday at Northwestern to exchange views on one of the greatest problems confronting the newspaper world today.

The day-long sessions will examine "Government Encroachment on Freedom of Information."

Featured guest of the conference will be exiled Argentine editor Alberto Gainza Paz.

The former publisher of the renowned Buenos Aires daily, La Prensa, will have a personal interest in the discussions. His newspaper was seized last Mar. 20 by dictator Juan Peron, when Gainza Paz continued to print the truth about the Argentine tyrannical regime.

Gainza Paz is one of the major guests of Northwestern during the Centennial celebration. He accepted a university invitation to come to the campus from his Montevideo, Uruguay, exile.

THE NATION'S TOP newspapermen, meeting with Gainza Paz, will explore three aspects of press freedom:

- 1. The growing suppression of newspapers by dictator-ruled countries.
2. The Communist iron curtain on the free flow of information between the East and the West.
3. The growing tendency of government officials in the United

Admission to the Gainza Paz convocation will be by ticket only. These may be secured from the School of Journalism office at no charge. One ticket will be reserved for each journalism student, and the remainder will be on a first-come-first-served basis.

States to withhold information vital to the public.

John Knight, editor and publisher of the Chicago Daily News, will chairmen Sunday's conference.

SESSIONS ARE sponsored jointly by the Medill School of Journalism and the Inter-American Press association.

The conference will begin at 10 a.m. in the Women's lounge of Scott hall. Meetings are closed to the public.

A partial list of newspaper magnates attending includes: Seymour Berkson (general manager, International News service); James Brown (editor of Editor and Publisher magazine); Erwin Canham (editor, Christian Science Monitor).

MARSHALL FIELD Jr. (editor and publisher, Chicago Sun-Times); William Randolph Hearst Jr. (publisher, New York Journal American); Arthur Knock (political columnist, New York Times).

Joseph Pulitzer Jr. (publisher, St. Louis Post-Dispatch); Frank Starzell (general manager, Associated Press); Walter Stone (editor, Scripps-Howard Newspaper alliance); Roy Roberts (publisher, Kansas City Star); and Basil Walters, executive editor, Knight publications).

Gainza Paz will be awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Journalism at an all-university convocation at 4 p.m. Monday at Cahn auditorium.

THE ARGENTINE editor-publisher will make his only major address in the United States at this time.

The Paz time-table will include: Friday, 7 p.m.—Chicago Newspaper Publishers' Association banquet in his honor, Grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

Friday, 10:15 p.m.—guest on Clifton Utley's program, WNBQ-TV. Saturday, following the Colorado football game—honored guest at reception at President Miller's home.

Sunday, 10 a.m. — Conference, "Government Encroachment on Freedom of Information."

Sunday, 10:30 a.m.—Northwestern Reviewing Stand, WGN and the Mutual Broadcasting system. Topic: "Freedom of Information and How it Affects All of Us."

Sunday, 5 p.m.—Initiated into the Northwestern chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism honorary fraternity, Scott hall.

Monday, 4 p.m. — Convocation, Cahn Auditorium. Awarded honorary Doctor of Journalism. Major address. Broadcast by WNMP.
