Illinois is a signature of the NASDTEC Interstate Agreement for Educator Licensure. State requirements are subject to change. These statements and program completion do not guarantee licensure. Students should review licensure requirements – including non-educational requirements such as external examination, work experience, background checks, etc. – for the states in which they intend to seek certification/licensure. If interested in obtaining educator/teacher licensure in a state other than Illinois, students should first contact the state board of education or equivalent in the desired state for details on that state's licensure process. Students may also inquire as to whether the desired state allows reciprocity/transferring of a license from the state of Illinois. The Licensure Manager located in the School of Education may also assist teacher candidates with their target state's requirements.

Educational Requirements for Licensure in Psychology

The Clinical Psychology PhD Program in the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences at Northwestern University (referred to as the "Program") makes every effort to provide education that is compliant with national standards and to prepare students to practice clinical psychology. As recognition of our compliance with national standards, our Program is accredited by the American Psychological Association. The practice of psychology, however, is regulated at the state level. State licensing authorities, commonly referred to as "State Boards," determine the specific educational and training requirements for licensure in their State. Of note, many States require post-doctoral training as well as examinations beyond educational and training requirements. As such, a PhD degree from our Program in Clinical Psychology is not sufficient, in and of itself, to meet licensure requirements in most states.

If you are planning to pursue professional licensure or certification, it is strongly recommended that you contact the appropriate licensing entity in the state for which you are seeking licensure or certification to obtain information and guidance regarding licensure or certification requirements before beginning an academic program. Given that State requirements for licensure or certification vary and may change over time, it is also strongly recommended that you review licensing or certification requirements as you get closer to seeking licensure or certification. You are encouraged to review the Association of State and Provincial Psychology Boards' online tool, PsyBook (https://www.asppb.net/page/psybook), which summarizes requirements for most states and territories and is updated annually. You are also encouraged to confirm State licensing requirements directly with the State for which you are interested in seeking licensure or certification.

Northwestern University, to the best of its ability, determined that the curriculum offered by our Program meets – or does not meet – the educational requirements for licensure or certification to practice psychology in each of the States listed in Table 1. For States in which the Program's educational offerings do not meet a specific State's requirements for licensure or certification, students may be required to obtain alternate, different, or more courses, or more experiential or clinical hours required. These findings are accurate, to the best of our ability, as of August 1, 2022.

This table specifies if, based on the available information available as of August 1, 2022, the Clinical Psychology PhD Program in the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences at Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine satisfies the curricular requirements for licensing in each state. Please note that this table does not include an evaluation of state-specific requirements beyond that of educational or curricular requirements.
